Subject: [MED-EM] Dr. Christopher Lindsell

Colleagues,

When one of our brightest stars is offered a truly outstanding opportunity elsewhere we celebrate their success, thank them for their service, wish them well and then quietly share in our sadness at their pending departure. With this email I must announce that Dr. Christopher Lindsell will be leaving this summer to take on a truly worthy new role at Vanderbilt University. He will be sorely missed.

At the heart of academics is the pursuit of new knowledge through research. Our department is a very special place for researchers and in my mind no individual has had a more dramatic impact on our success than Dr. Christopher Lindsell. For 12 years Dr. Lindsell has led our departmental efforts in this arena. Truly one of the smartest people I've ever met, his intelligence is eclipsed only by his dedication and we have all benefited from his efforts.

Dr. Lindsell joined the University of Cincinnati as a research scientist and biostatistician in the Institute for the Study of Health in 2001. We began working with Chris during his tenure there and were fortunate to recruit him into our department in 2005. Regardless of his title within our department, he has always been a true research leader. He has served as our Vice Chairman for research since 2010 and has aided our department by elevating the research efforts of our entire college serving as the Associate Dean for Clinical Research since 2013. His accomplishments are innumerable and it requires a 51-page CV to catalog them. Can you imagine an individual who is only 45 years old having 224 peer-reviewed publications? His efforts have always been to serve others rather than his own research agenda and I can honestly say that anyone in our department who has had anything to do with research is in his debt.

When you see him next please thank him for his service and remind him that he will forever be one of us.
